

Select Bibliography

As a work of re-interpretation, A New Britannia relies on secondary sources. Because I have constructed an argument out of them, the works listed should not be seen as corroborating my conclusions; rather they are expressions of my indebtedness.

At times, primary sources were consulted, the principal ones being:

Historical Records of New South Wales

Historical Records of Australia

Official Reports of Intercolonial Trade Union Congresses, 1879–91

Shearers' Record, Melbourne, 1888–91

Shearers and General Labourers' Record, Melbourne, 1891–93

Commonweal, Melbourne, 1891–93

Tocsin, Melbourne, 1897–1906

Labor Call, 1906–1918

Newspapers and parliamentary debates were checked for particular points, for example, the Melbourne Argus for conscription in 1916–17.

The remainder of the bibliography is divided into two. The first part contains works which were of general interest or do not refer specifically to a single chapter. The second part is a series of chapter sources and reading guides. Both parts remain selective.
